China Life Insurance (Overseas) Company Limited

This summary highlights key policy terms for reference only. Coverage and exclusions are governed by the formal policy terms and endorsements.

Chapter 1 Policy Contract

Article 1 Composition of the Contract

This insurance contract (the "Contract") is constituted by the policy, the terms, endorsements, the application form and other agreed documents. Any amendment to the Contract must be evidenced by a written endorsement issued by the insurance company; verbal agreements are not effective.

Article 2 Commencement of Coverage

The insurance company's liability under the Contract commences upon payment of the first premium by the applicant and issuance of the policy by the insurance company. Conditions or accidents that occur before coverage commences are not covered.

Article 3 Waiting Period

The Contract has a 90-day waiting period from the effective date. If the insured is first diagnosed with, or shows symptoms of, a covered condition during the waiting period, the insurance company is not liable, except for conditions directly caused by accidents. For reinstated policies, the waiting period is recalculated from the reinstatement effective date.

Chapter 2 Scope of Cover

Article 4 Critical Illness Benefit

The Contract covers 56 critical illnesses, including but not limited to cancer, acute myocardial infarction, stroke, chronic renal failure, major organ transplantation and coronary artery bypass surgery. If the insured is diagnosed by a registered doctor with a critical illness meeting the policy definition, the insurance company pays 100% of the sum assured as the critical illness benefit.

Article 5 Early-stage Illness Benefit

The Contract covers 52 early-stage conditions and 20 benign tumors. If the insured is diagnosed with an early-stage condition (e.g. carcinoma in situ, early-stage thyroid cancer, percutaneous coronary intervention), the insurance company pays 20% of the sum assured in advance. Each early-stage condition is payable once, the total advanced payment is capped at 40% of the sum assured, and it does not affect subsequent critical illness claims.

Article 6 Multiple Claim Arrangement

The Contract pays up to 5 critical illness claims, grouped into cancer, cardiac and vascular diseases, neurological diseases and other diseases. Each group is payable once; for persistent, recurrent or metastatic cancer, at least 3 years must have elapsed since the previous cancer claim. After each critical illness claim, premiums are waived and cover continues in force.

Chapter 3 Exclusions

Article 7 General Exclusions

The insurance company is not liable if the insured's illness results from any of the following: (1) the applicant or beneficiary intentionally causes injury or illness to the insured; (2) a condition that existed before the policy took effect and was known to the applicant or insured at the time of application; (3) drug abuse, alcoholism or self-harm by the insured; (4) war, acts of war, riots or nuclear radiation contamination; (5) a condition diagnosed within the waiting period.

Article 8 Duty of Disclosure

The applicant and the insured must truthfully answer all questions in the health questionnaire at the time of application. If material facts are deliberately concealed or false statements are made that could affect the insurer's underwriting decision, the insurance company has the right to rescind the Contract within two years of its formation; if discovered after two years, where fraud is involved, the insurance company still has the right to rescind the Contract.

Chapter 4 Claims Procedures

Article 9 Claim Notification and Application

The insured or beneficiary should notify the insurance company within 180 days of diagnosis of a covered condition and submit: the claim form, a medical certificate issued by a registered doctor, pathological and imaging reports, and the insured's identity document. The insurance company has the right to require the insured to undergo an examination by a doctor appointed by it, at the company's expense.

Article 10 Payment of Benefits

The insurance company completes its review within 30 days of receiving all claim documents. Where liability applies, the benefit is paid within 7 days of reaching a settlement agreement; overdue payments accrue interest at the Hong Kong Association of Banks' best lending rate plus 1%. Benefits are paid to the policyholder or designated beneficiary.

Chapter 5 Premiums and Renewal

Article 11 Premium Payment

Premiums are calculated based on the insured's age, gender, smoking status and sum assured at application. The premium payment period is 18 or 25 years, at the applicant's choice. A 31-day grace period applies after each premium due date, during which cover remains in force; if premiums remain unpaid after the grace period, the Contract lapses.

Article 12 Policy Reinstatement

Within 24 months of lapse, the applicant may apply for reinstatement by paying all outstanding premiums and interest and submitting a new health declaration; after underwriting approval, the Contract is restored. The waiting period is recalculated after reinstatement.
